Dear Mr. Brashear:

I have always been interested in pursuing a job in the medical field. Growing up around my papaw being sick I was always there to take care of him. I think that had a big impact on me as a person but also on wanting to be a nurse. Now I am taking CNA classes I have realized that I want to be much more than that. A surgical nurse really caught my eye and is something I would really be interested in. Now I have had people ask me, what if you don't like your job. Now I have thought about that but honestly the medical field is such a wide range of jobs that I could go anywhere I felt I could do. You start at the bottom and just work your way to the top to pursue the job you really want.

I hope by researching this career more I learn more about it. I know for a fact it will help me get a better idea on how much this particular job is for me. Baptist East hospital was where I was born in and I was hoping on working there when I get older. I have heard so many good things about it from all of my family's friends. So I decided I wanted to job shadow a surgical nurse there and get a better view on how there hospital works. My mom has a friend that is a RN that can get me to shadow one of her friends. Now I know that they are very busy throughout the day, so if I don't get to work with a surgical nurse, I hope I can get the experience of an actual nurse. I believe that this job is perfect for me, and I cannot wait to start finding out more about it. So can I please have your permission to research further on this particular career?

Sincerely,

Alyssa Owen

Dear Mr. Brashear,

I have always wanted to pursue a career in the medical field. And the job that most interests me in this field is surgical nursing. I find this a very important and riveting job. I have always found surgeries fascinating. Now that I have actually been through a surgery (or two) it has made me want to help people who are going through the same things that I did. My surgeries have given me the desire to look further into this career and research it for my senior project.

I've always wanted a job that is never boring, where I get to help a lot of people, and work with kids. Since I love helping others and children then I would probably end up working at a children's hospital. I know this job will be difficult at times, but even through the hard times I will have to look at all the positive things I do, and all the people I help.

I am going to shadow a surgical/post-op nurse at Baptist East. A family friend used to work at Baptist East so she is going to talk to the educator about setting up a shadow date.

Thank you for taking the time to read this. I hope you see why I chose this career and allow me to use this for my senior project!

Sincerely,

Paxton Gordon
